MACHINISTS' STRIKE ENDS

BIG FOUR WILL NOT HAVE FURTHER TROUBLE WITH EMPLOYES.

Committee That Went to Wabash Succeeded in Bringing About an Amicable Agreement.

As a result of the conference held in Wabash Wednesday night the striking machinists in the Big Four shops of that city returned to work yesterday at noon. The matter was discussed until 3 o'clock in the morning by the machinists and the committee which met them and which was of D. W. Roderick, of Chicago, of the Midland Associated District of I. A. M.: Thomas Hawkes, secretary of this district of the International Machinists' Union; George Thomas, chairman of the district and W. Grass, district

The trouble was finally adjusted by more or less of a compromise. The executive committee made a proposition to the men that the number of hours of work be equalized in all the Big Four shops in the State-the equalization being based on the number of men employed. In the Big Four shops of the State it will take about sixty more men to do the work on a nine-hour schedule. The Big Four officials were called up at a late hour last night and agreed to hire the force necessary to bring the work | Condition down to nine hours throughout the whole district. Until the required machinists can be secured the Wabash men will return to work under the ten-hour system and assist in securing more machinists. At present the demand for good machinists is greater than the supply.

GARSTANG AGREEABLE. Mr. Roderick returned to the city yesterchinists believe that they can be brought in within a very short time and do not think that they will have to work ten hours a day more than a week longer. The trouble, Mr. Roderick said, was the result of a misunderstanding between the employers and the machinists. The contract between the two specifies that the men shall work nine hours a day as long as enough machinists can be had to do the work in that time. The Big Four officials were working their men ten hours a day at the same time refusing to fill vacancies that would bring about a shorter day. The point was not clearly defined when the demands of the machinists were made and hence the deadlock between the employers. and the men. There were about twentyseven men involved in the strike and until an understanding was reached it was feared a strike would ensue in all the Big Four shops.

Mr. Roderick said last night that he did not see how the men could have acted otherwise than they did as they were working under unfair conditions. He thought, however, the strike could have been avoided had the men and the employers held a previous conference and discussed the matter.

CANTRELL IS A NUISANCE

THAT IS THE OPINION OF CAPTAIN GERBER, OF DETECTIVE FORCE.

All His Talking Done for Sake of Notoriety, Gerber Believes-Detectives on Selvage Case.

The city detectives are working on the Selvage case through information given them by Rufus Cantrell, the convicted grave robber, but they report they are no nearer the solution of the problem of the mysterious disappearance of Miss Selvage in 1900, than they were several days ago. Clews have been picked up and dropped and new ones taken up in their places, but all, when run down, have so far proved to amount to nothing. Detectives Asch and ulation. The city detective department is in correspondence with Cantrell, who is now back in the Reformatory in Jeffersonville, and it is said have received several important pieces of information from him by mail since his departure. The police are firm in their belief that if Cantrell is not promised clemency for his many crimes he will refuse to tell exactly what it is necessary to know before any arrests can be made. They believe that the ghoul, if so disposed, could throw light on the case of Miss Selvage as well as clear up a number of other

He says that Cantrell has merely shown the people that he is a nuisance to the community and has done all his talking for the purpose of gaining public notoriety. Gerber also stated that he does not believe anything of what the ghoul had told of the Selvage case. "In fact," the captain said, "I put very little faith in anything Cantrell has told and think most of it is that peculiar quality of 'hot air' Cantrell is so fond of handing out.'

has reached such an acute stage that fair- | day morning to answer a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Cline, it is said, represented to Frank O'Brien, a saloon keeper on East Washington street. that he had a quantity of whisky stored in a Kentucky warehouse which he would sell at a low price, and on agreement closed the deal with O'Brien, accepting $139 for the liquor. Mr. O'Brien later sent to the warehouse for the whisky and found, he says, Councilman John H. Crall, who wants to that Cline had never paid for it. The case succeed himself in the Third ward, took, was continued until July 29.
